The Purpose of the Study

This study examines the current state of professional writing in the countries of the former Soviet Union. The goal of this study, in turn, is to identify trends or patterns in professional writing/professional communication practices in the various republics of the former USSR. To achieve this objective, the authors conducted a review of representative samples of the academic and professional literature in the field of technical and professional writing/communication and to focus specifically on works published between 1991 (the dissolution of the Soviet Union) and 2011 to identify articles that examined professional communication practices in the former USSR. In so doing, the authors looked at works published in both in North America venues and publications from the former Soviet Union. Thus, the time range for this review covers the period since the dissolution of the USSR and the gaining of independence by its former republics.
